

Staff Reflection Survey for Next Year Re-entry

This survey will help the Re-Entry Team in making some plans.

* Required

1. What has been the hardest part of teaching online so far? I think it has been keeping the students on task and parents involved in education. *

---

2. What new skills have you had to learn to be able to teach online? I've learned how to download and upload assignments on Google Classroom and grading work online. *

---

3. What support, training, or guidance would be needed to prepare to teach online or from a remote location in the future? I think informing parents and students about the implications of online learning and training them to use it effectively. I think teachers need to know how to use it well too. I think we need some way to hold parents/students accountable for not doing any work at all. *

---

---

---

---

---

4. What support, training, or guidance would be needed to prepare to teach online or from a remote location in the future? I think informing parents and students about the implications of online learning and training them to use it effectively. I think teachers need to know how to use it well too. I think we need some way to hold parents/students accountable for not doing any work at all. *

---

---

---

---

---

5. What concerns do you have for your at-risk students? These students may be SPED, 504, ELL, Economically Disadvantaged, or have other factors that may cause you to be concerned? They need the most support from general and sped teachers. *

---

---

---

---

---

6. Do you have a success story that you would like to share? The kids that are doing well on Google Classroom are learning how to download documents and use them. This is an essential skill. *

---

---

---

---

---